

SUSAN L. MACEY

In April of 2008, Susan Macey joined the professional staff of arbiters at Judicial Arbitrator Group, Inc. (JAG) based in Denver, Colorado. As one of the oldest, most successful private judicial services in the country, JAG provides the legal and business community with cost effective, efficient dispute resolution programs. Prior to joining JAG, Ms. Macey served as Indiana's Utility Consumer Counselor where she oversaw a staff of nearly fifty attorneys, technical experts, external affairs specialists and support personnel who represent Indiana's utility consumers in state and federal regulatory proceedings. After having served eight years as a Superior Court Judge (a court of general jurisdiction) in Indianapolis, she practiced as a mediator and arbitrator in the Indianapolis firm of Van Winkle Baten Rimstidt Dispute Resolution. In addition to serving as legal counsel to the Indiana Senate and the City of Indianapolis, her time in private practice included a stint with the Indianapolis based firm of Barnes & Thornburg, LLP where she specialized in employment and labor law. In addition to previous experience in resolving tort, employment, labor and general commercial litigation, as the Utility Consumer Counselor she has additionally developed an interest and expertise in natural resources, public policy, environmental issues, public utilities and environmental dispute resolution. Ms. Macey also served as an Adjunct Professor of Law at Indiana University where she taught Mediation Advocacy and is a graduate of the Indiana University School of Law-Bloomington. She and her husband, Matthew, reside in the Highlands with their furry friend, Shelby, and enjoy the Colorado outdoors as well as a wide range of activities available in metro Denver.
